

Camp Osito Rancho

Location: Big Bear Lake

Description: Camp

Camp Osito Rancho is an outdoor camp, circa 1955, that has seen many updates and renovations to the various structures contained within. The camp is located within the San Bernardino National Forest and consists of 160 acres of grounds at an elevation of 7,500 feet. Due to the elevation, there is limited access to the camp November through May as the property receives heavy and frequent snows during the winter months.

The site contains a ranger's house, main lodge (approx 5,000 sq. ft.) with two fireplaces, multi-stall restrooms with showers, a dining hall with a commercial kitchen, new swimming pool and pool house, two program yurts, horse tack house and corral, and a newly remodeled infirmary. In addition, five tent platform sites are supported by multi-shower, multi-flush toilet restroom platforms. Each tent platform unit sleeps 28 girls.

The main lodge, dining hall and tack house were remodeled circa 2000. A new pool was installed in the summer of 2011, along with improvements to the dining hall that were completed in 2010.

GSGLA has run its resident camp program from the facility since the summer of 2010. Activities include horseback riding, archery, high adventure course (ropes course, rock climbing and zip line), and pond for canoeing.
